Q2: DSISD is projected to gain about 1,000 high school students over the next five years and another 1,100 students by the 2030 school year (totaling an estimated 4,400 by 2030). The current student capacity of Dripping Springs High School is 2,500 and this year's enrollment is 2,335. It takes approximately four years to build a comprehensive high school. To serve this growth need, DSISD should build a second comprehensive high school at 2,500 student capacity.

Q5: Right now, total middle school enrollment across DSISD is 1,825 and total capacity between both middle schools is 2,050. Using existing attendance zones, SSMS is already over capacity by approximately 76 students with more growth expected. To serve this growth need, DSISD should expand Sycamore Springs Middle School from 850 student capacity to 1,200 student capacity.

Q7: DSISD currently owns about 219 acres on three sites on which to build future schools or facilities. The district expects to use two of the three sites for the next set of constructed schools. With continued growth, and land price and availability factors, DSISD should acquire more land to support the district's growth.
